AXSMarine launches AXSDry Light, a small-office version of its industry-leading AXSDry services

Paris, France, October 10, 2007 – AXSMarine, provider of online databases, reference guides and tools enabling shipping industry professionals to transform raw data into useful, searchable information, has announced the launch of a subscription package specifically tailored to small offices with one or two individual users.

While the majority of AXSDry's customers are large corporations with users across multiple sites, the suite's inherent flexibility means a 1- or 2-man chartering team can use it successfully as well: hence the creation of this special solution, designed and priced for 1- or 2-person firms.

This new "light" version of AXSDry allows for an ultra-quick set-up and more importantly, offers significant cost savings over the full-version subscription rates.

"It is important to us that our customers can choose the level of service they want and pay for it accordingly," said Stephen J. Fletcher, AXSMarine Commercial Director, "Over the last year, AXSMarine has been steadily improving its AXSDry offering for dry bulk shipping professionals, and we're pleased to now be able to adapt our offer and our pricing structure to make these services available to small offices."

Interested 1- or 2-person brokering and chartering firms should contact AXSMarine for a free trial.

About AXSMarine
